

THE SHADOW REBORN

Inspiring Inactivity

Volume 5, Issue 1

Concordia's Finest News Source

CAB To Sponsor A Campus Activity

AL LOUNGE - The Concordia student body was rocked last week by an announcement from the Campus Activities Board (CAB), as Head CAB Driver Quentin Saldworth promised students "an activity". In previous years, CAB has tried and failed to organize actual events, but Saldworth has pledged to "turn things around."

Enthusiasm and confidence are both high for this year's attempt at an activity, but some students are skeptical. "I mean, they've said this every year I've been here," said senior Charlie Fane. "They always say that they have some great stuff planned, but then what happens? Nothing."

Despite the precedent, though, most students are looking forward to the activity. Super-senior Shannon Muzikrezwiski, set to begin her sixth year, is one of the hopefuls. "I remember... I think it was my freshman semester, they did something. It was, like, a pizza party, or it was supposed to be. But I think they messed up and got big boxes of floor tiling instead of pizza, and Draino instead of soda. Which meant that we ended up hungry, but all of the home-improvement geeks just loved it."

Interestingly, Saldworth has been vague on what exactly the activity is going to be. When contacted about the plans, he had the following to say: "What? Oh, right. That...um...yeah. Um, right. The, uh, activity. We are, uh... planning, ya know, to begin to consider put together a sort of consortium, or, as one might say, a think tank, to discuss the possibility of an...activity. Or an event. I'm not exactly, um, sure, which, right now. We just want to, ya know, the scheduling and...nightmare...logistical...bi-weekly reports in triplicate...you get my drift. We just need to...ya know, um, pull it off. The, um...tell ya what. Can I get back to you on this one? Okay, thanks."

TSR will stay current with this story.

Acronym Changes

HEALTH SERVICES—In a week full of startling policy changes by CUW administration, the department formerly known as Physical Therapy has issued a statement detailing their plans to change the name and focus of their major.

According to the statement, PT has been "all about helping people for too long", and faculty are "growing tired of teaching hard things like how to improve people's health after accidents". The department will now shift its focus to cheap model automotives. "PT shouldn't stand for Physical Therapy. Why can't it stand for something like Plastic Trucks? Actually, let's go with that. That sounds like fun."

Classes in the new concentration are already available for signup in Banner; PT 263: Hot Wheels Theory filled up within minutes of being opened, while PT 395: Comparative Historical Perspectives on Late-Middle-Period Japanese Sandbox Excavators is in danger of being canceled.

In a related story, OT students were informed that their degrees would now be in Old Testament, not Occupational Therapy, and that they'd better start brushing up on their post-Exilic minor prophet lineages.

Thanks from Hank

Homeless Hank our beloved hobo wanted to say thanks to The Shadow for sharing his story and their use of sackcloth to return trays to the cafeteria.

Right: Homeless Hank our beloved food critic.

Zero Tolerance

Next to your local photon accelerator - Dr. Steffen Eagling has taken tarty students to school, literally. He stated in an interview earlier this year "Students that don't show up on time bug me, so I have taken a no tolerance policy, not the schools policy, I needed something effective. Which is why I am introducing the "CUW S.W." (Slacker Warp)." The Slacker Warp which he gave us a brief demonstration of on August 29th by warping in a student who was attempting to sleep through class and dropping him sheets and all into an empty chair in the front row.

"During the summer I was testing this using the football team and after a rather embarrassing incident involving a toothbrush, a squirrel, a keg, and a foam hammer we warp the bed sheets with them..." This incident is known as an average night in Wittenberg resulted in the arrests of three squirrels that where found smoking toothpaste out of a bong, but had the whitest teeth anyone has ever seen on a squirrel.

Dr. Steffen Eagling also stated that this S.W. while may not bring the most cheerful students to class makes sure that they are there, and he also uses a negative enforcement

Continued on page 2...

Not in Kansas Any More

Not Kansas - In a startling display of intelligence and common sense, freshman Judith Crowner has discovered that, since coming to Concordia, she is no longer in Kansas. She came to this conclusion at approximately 9.45 Friday night, scant hours after the beginning of CUW's intensive Orientation Weekend for incoming freshmen.

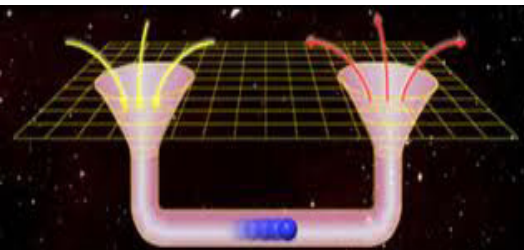

According to sources, Crowner was sitting in Heidelberg Lounge shortly before Capture the Flag was scheduled to be played when she clutched her stuffed toy dog Total to her and exclaimed, "Total, I've a feeling we're not in Kansas anymore."

Crowner was born and raised in Wheaton, KS, a rural farming community nearly 60 miles from Topeka. Upon arriving at Concordia earlier in the day in her Ford Tornado, she was visibly shocked at the sunset orange-painted children's choir hired by Admissions to bolster freshman morale with songs of welcome.

Campus Safety has been notified of Crowner's sudden realization, and they have issued the following statement: "Judith, we understand your pain, and all we want is to help you cope with your transition. As for you, my fine lady, it's true we can't attend to you here and now as we'd like; but just try to stay out of our way - just try! We'll get you, pretty one, and your little dog too!"

After issuing this statement, Campus Safety magically vanished.

Below - Where Crowner Isn't Anymore

Fine Dining

For those of you that are new to Concordia, you may not be aware of the fine dining facilities available to students. Concordia is serviced by Sodexo, a French owned catering company that strives to feed people with excellence and style. Sodexo's mission is to, "Provide the finest quality meals and service available at reasonable costs to our students, faculty, and guests." At least while your parents are here. After that, go with God.

However, Sodexo has, apparently, made some additions to its staff recently. Sodexo's new lead cook, Chef Chard, told us recently of a recipe using a slow cooking method he discovered over the summer, "It's called Soylent Augsburg—you'll never guess the secret ingredient!" In unrelated news, it seems that several students that remained on campus over the summer have gone missing.

Above - Sodexo's "gourmet" food

Continued... from page 1

policy on students that use cell phones in class "They may or may not end up in a toilet in Augsburg." This is why lower (men's) Augsburg has its distinct sewage and burning electronics odor.

Left: A simple drawing of the wormholes that Dr. Steffen Eagling uses to keep students on time.

We do take submissions so please the writers of the shadow this year are very busy and if you want to submit a paper we may or may not use it. The guidelines are on our website. Have a good year and slack hard...

Math Monotony

Luther 3.14 - Last week brings a new low to math at CUW, when math professor Dr. Modus "PWNS" Bernoulli (who is known for being a dull teacher) actually put herself to sleep during her own lecture. A study released last March, provided evidence that the amount of sleep that one is able to get during a math class increases exponentially as time reaches zero (the end of class). Sleep is rated in snoozes per minute and generally stays at 1:1 even during deep sleep where it may reach  $1:1.25 \pm .25$ . So what this means is that you can actually get a full night's sleep during the last 10 minutes of your math class.

This comes in the face of studies that claim that the large amount of homework can actually cause health problems from the hours of sleepless nights "playing that new Halo gamey thing, eating nontoxic food not found on campus, or whatever these darn kids do these days in the dorms... excuse me Residence Halls".

Dr. Modus "PWNS" Bernoulli stated that she will be livening up her classes by no longer having the class deduce the probability using old freshman toss methodology but now the probability of whether a howler monkey will actually howl or just hit freshmen*, and throw fecal matter at the class. This results in a smelly mess and "following the cleanup they will have to find the probability of it landing on them which will be there homework."

*Side note TSR promotes the use of howler monkeys to humiliate freshman.

Below: Graphically shown the rate of snoozes per min as Time reaches 0.

